

MAIN STREET, U.S.A.

Described by Walt Disney as the "heart line of America," Main Street, U.S.A. is an exact replica of a small town main street in that happy era from 1890 to 1910. Complete in every detail, from the horse-drawn streetcars which trundle up Main Street to the fire department's hub-of-the-century hose and chemical wagon, "powered" by real fire hoses. You'll see and visit all of the 1930 period business enterprises on Main Street: the photographer's shop, ice cream parlor, bakery, meat market and grocery, bank, music shop, drug store and many others — all operating exactly as they did 50 years ago.

ADVENTURELAND

These romantic, tropical far-away places that all of us yearn to see, await your visit in Adventureland. A Tahitian trading post provides an exotic threshold for this wonder-world of nature's own design. Here you'll marvel at the display of tropical flowers, birds, fish and native bird-craft parrots from all latitudes. An adventure cruise on an exotic jolly boat, over the tropical reefs of the world is a highlight of Adventureland. On this exciting trip, you'll visit the island jungles, reefs, birds, monkeys and even native savages. You'll board ventures under a real waterfall as you explore the tropical plants and foliage gathered from all over the world. Truly, an adventure to remember in Adventureland.

FRONTIERLAND

Frontierland is where you'll actually "live" America's colorful and historic past. You enter Frontierland through the gates of an old log fort — and see the rugged frontiersmen and Indians of many tribes, gathered at the entrance. All the stores and buildings, reminiscent of this period, line the board walk of the town. At the blacksmith shop, you'll watch ponies being shod — next door you'll see the harness maker at work and across the street the even-famous general store.

How about "hopping" a freight train? At the Frontierland station, you can board a scaled-down version of an old-time Santa Fe and Disneyland "iron horse," and ride in the freight car comfortably provided with special seats for an exciting ride around the perimeter of the park. You can board a buckboard, Conestoga Wagon or Concord Stage to ride by the Marshal's office, the jail, assay office and other frontier enterprises, including an exciting trip through the Painted Desert. The Golden Horseshoe, "largest little bar with the fastest glassful of pop," faces a river dock in Frontierland. From here you can board a 105 foot paddle-wheeler steamboat for a cruise on the rivers of America.

TOMORROWLAND

The daring land of dreams and hopes, upon which the future rests. You'll see the giant pylon-like TWA space rocket, and buildings of advanced architectural design, participate in American industries' imaginative and exciting exhibits — all commemorating what the future holds for everyone. Among Tomorrowland's exhibits will be an advance motion picture development, Circarama, consisting of continuous images focused on a 360° screen; the three billion year story of the universe from the time the earth was a flaming globe whirling endlessly through space; and a story on its production with a 40 foot diameter of the long flash area for the setting. You'll see an enormous kaleidoscope of color, a gigantic aluminum telescope; a futuristic conception of American home appliances and installations.

A coat of Honor will grace the center of Tomorrowland, flying flags of each state and the American flag. Tape recordings will be used instead of the customary register to identify guests. The Silver Mirror exhibit, 100,000 lozenges (over the fire) will also be an attraction in Tomorrowland.

Next young drivers-to-be will learn future driving techniques through an audio-visual centerway, from Tomorrowland you can have an aerial view of America by boarding a space station which, traveling at terrific speeds in an orbit 500 miles above the earth's surface, or you can take passengers in a 4000-foot rocket making a round trip to the moon.

In short, all of man's dreams of the future are realities in Tomorrowland at Disneyland.

FANTASYLAND

A world of imagination — come to life. You'll cross a drawbridge to enter Fantasyland through the portals of a medieval castle with towers and garrets rising dizzy above you. Its Fantasyland you'll take the Peter Pan ride aboard a pirate galleon that aims our romantic London by Never Land, home of Mermaids, Buccaneers, Indians and Lost Boys, and fit through the Darling home, take the Snow White ride and meet the Seven Dwarfs, the Wicked Witch, who will offer you a poisoned apple, and all the other characters of this romantic classic. Mr. Toad's Wild Ride runs through a series of misadventures in a 1903 vintage automobile, knocking over a cow and crashing into a barn; you'll travel through the "Pearly Gates" to the sounds of heavenly music. Other gay, novel amusements of Fantasyland are based on cartoon or story book characters that Walt Disney has brought to screen life: Dumbo, the Flying Elephant, a breath-taking aerial ride, the Mad Tea Party, King Arthur Carousel with 72 gorgeous steeds, the Casey Jr. circus train, Canal Boats of America, England, France and Nubian Attractions.
